OCKTONS LAST NOVEL — LADY

FELICIA, a Novel by Henry Cockton, Esq., author of "Valentime Vor.," "Srivester round," "The Love March," "Stalley thorn," &c. liustrated, price 50 cents.

"The subter of "Valentime Vox and Srivester Sount," and other humorous publications, which enjoyed a wide postularity when publicated in a periodical form à 42 Discoust, here concentrates all his amusing talent into a single volume of readable dimensions. Our author is fond of strong contrasts and eccentric points of character: now touching off with devotional pendi the personal graces of a beautivel boade of assisteratic lineage; now reveiling in the gaody fiberty of chains and paste rings of a haber-desher's shopman who, by the way, beneath his absundly-decorated boson carries a good, rough henest heart; now a love scene, now an elopement, now a conclose of village politicians. The story is founded upon a case of renderess between an Earl's daughter and a plobelan shopman (act he of the more jeweiry), but who has received an education above his station in life. What enters—how the course of their trus love is under tourselves by stating that the story is worked out in great detail, and with most amounts greifect."
